

Contents

“Going to paradise”

PREFACE

Scope of this book

Why Rwanda’s prisons are unique

Recent events in Rwanda

CHAPTER I

Forty centimetres: space

“Hell on earth”: the early years (1994-1999)

Improvements in prison conditions since 1999

The state of prisons in 2004

Health care

Food

Trading space

A life of luxury

Fashion

CHAPTER II

The prisoners’ government: organisation

The structure

The capita général

Elections

Getting rich inside

The prison administration

Searches

CHAPTER III

Tomatoes, blackboards and guitars: work and leisure

Work

Education

Entertainment

CHAPTER IV

God

CHAPTER V

“Living as sisters – a survival strategy”: women in prison

Conditions and organisation of the women’s blocks

Relations between the women

Babies in prison

Relations between women and men

CHAPTER VI

Real minors and false minors: children in prison

- Absolute minors
- Genocide minors
- Minors' living conditions
- Activities for minors
- Sexual abuse

CHAPTER VII

Families in prison

CHAPTER VIII

Waiting to die: the elderly in prison

- Lists and more lists
- Ill-treatment in detention
- The survival of the elderly in the central prisons
- Activities for the elderly
- The vulnerable among the vulnerable
- The memory of the family
- The response of the government

CHAPTER IX

Two armies in prison: the military prisoners

- Life in the civilian prisons
- Life in military detention

CHAPTER X

“You could count yourself as dead”: memories of the cachots and brigades

- Torture and killings
- Visits
- Prisoners' testimonies
- Improvements in conditions of detention

CHAPTER XI

Three minutes: prison visits

- Conditions of visits in the central prisons
- Solitude
- Visits: the early years
- The significance of visits for prisoners

CHAPTER XII

“The time of crying is over”: the effect of imprisonment on the family

The economic burden
 The strain on relationships
 The gulf between prisoners and their families
 Deaths in prison
 The wider social circle

CHAPTER XIII

“Your father is a killer”: the next generation

Visiting parents in prison
 Explaining prison
 Children of interahamwe
 Separation
 The future

CHAPTER XIV

“It’s more human inside than outside”: relations between prisoners

Violence and the absence of violence
 Ethnic relations
Génocidaires and common criminals
 Friendships in prison

CHAPTER XV

“We are always in a state of maybe”: attitudes to imprisonment

Prison as home
 Hope and despair
 Looking back
 Looking forward: dreams of freedom
 Escaping

CHAPTER XVI

Talking

CHAPTER XVII

“Innocence can be subjective”: justice

The genocide trials
 “Buying innocence”
 The “big fish”
Gacaca
 The prisoners’ gacaca: “the real truth is in the prisons”
 The paralysis of the justice system
 Acquitted and still in prison
 Prisoners’ views on justice
 Justice for RPF and RPA crimes

CHAPTER XVIII

“The heaviest sentence”: prisoners sentenced to death

- The 1998 executions
- Life under sentence of death
- The abolition of the death penalty

CHAPTER XIX

Where the guilty are kings: confessions

- Propaganda, pressure and enticements
- The decision to confess
- “False confessions”
- “Real confessions”
- “The innocent”
- Double standards

CHAPTER XX

Freedom: a mirage

- The programme of releases
- Returning inside
- The ingando: “touching freedom”

CHAPTER XXI

Freedom: the reality

- The moment of release
- The process of readjustment
- Support for released prisoners
- Prison friendships

CHAPTER XXII

“I am still in that space now”

POSTSCRIPT

2007

APPENDICES

- Map of Rwanda
- Methodology
- Glossary of terms and acronyms
- Further reading

- Acknowledgements